Stern College for Women
Yeshiva University

It was as if we had lived all of our lives in a cave, dark and protective. It was safe, but it was not enough; and we knew that the shadows that blanketed and cushioned us also concealed the world beyond.

We groped toward a faint, distant light.
We wandered through dark, twisting passages that slowed our progress, but never stopped us.

At last, we reached the light at the end of the cave!

It was blinding. It was the sun in all its brilliance, dazzling us, yet making us see. The deluding shadows are forever behind us.
For we see the sun
and witness the wonders it reveals.

The sun is the source of light and warmth, the source of all life.

From the rib of man woman was created, and from a rib of the sun
the earth. The sun shines, and man strives forward like light.

... the highest courage is
... in defiant confidence, in the passionate choice — in spite of all — of hope and light.

Thy dawn, O Sun, opens the new horizon, And every realm that thou hast made to live Is conquered by thy splendor.

The sun impels us to know what is impenetrable to us really exists, manifesting itself as the highest wisdom, and the most radiant beauty . . .

Dedication

A vacuum was created
And two friends came to fill it.
It brimmed to over-Flowing with warmth and Care and patience.
Speaking words of wisdom,
They lighted worlds of darkness.
For every question, a response;
For every doubt, a hope;
For every broken heart
And stubborn mind, understanding.
Filled with warmth and Deep concern, care for more Than just today: Tomorrow is Another day — and very real.
Our eyes are opened.
Our hearts as well.

Mrs. Tovah Lichtenstein

Mrs. Shirley Shimoff

With my warmest congratulations to the members of the 1970 graduating class of Stern College for Women, I extend my best wishes for the future.

During the past four years, which have been a period of unrest and change throughout the world, you have had the unique opportunity to participate in the intellectual quest provided by the arts and sciences and in the spiritual resource of the timeless heritage of Judaism. There will be important challenges for you to meet as you fulfill your roles as citizens and as women, and I am confident that you will utilize vigor of mind and confidence in eternal values in making your contribution to home life, career, and community.

May you be granted continued well being and success.

Sincerely yours,

Samuel Belkin

Samuel Belkin
President

It gives me the greatest pleasure to extend greetings to the graduating class at Stern College for Women. The members of the Class of 1970 have had a significant role in the development of Stern College as it went forward in its second decade with gratifying physical expansion and a deepening awareness by students of the importance of excellence in education and the eternal values of Judaism for meaningful relevance to the challenges of the modern world.

As you go forward to take your roles in the home, in further study, in careers, and in the community, may you enjoy personal fulfillment and successful achievement. I am sure that your Alma Mater will have cause to be very proud of you.

I congratulate you on reaching this milestone with a worthy record, and extend every good wish for the future.

I am happy to extend my congratulations and best wishes to you as you prepare to leave Stern College to pursue your various ways. Today's undergraduates face a difficult, if not distressing, future in a world which seems to grow more uncertain and more threatening from day to day. To the natural condition of man, with its attendant dangers and difficulties, modern civilization seems to have added its own brand of frightening possibilities. In all areas, social, political, economic, and natural, man seems to have loosed forces which he can no longer control and which promise to repay him for their release by turning upon and constricting him.

The responses to this dismal prospect are varied. Some respond by falling into apathy, some become fatalistic, and others angered, cry for the destruction of the world which they did not create but whose burdens they are forced to take up. The time has come, they argue, for casting away traditions, for spurning what was accepted and believed, since every day proclaims that they have failed. If hope is to be found they contend, it is in the new, the untried.

One has always, of course, to be prepared to learn to use the new to solve problems, old and new. But at Yeshiva we hold firm to the belief that while we must be ever receptive to the new, we best refashion our world by basing it on those eternal values which permitted the world of our fathers to exist and flourish. In essence, the educational program at Stern College is a declaration of this belief.

While it is our hope and desire to train those women who enter our doors to the maximum of our ability, and their potential, and enable them to master new areas of knowledge and to be able to cope with the problems of our contemporary world, we also hope to give them a firm foundation in the everlasting values embodied in the Torah which have shaped the best of today's civilization. It is this conviction that gives Stern College its unique place in the world, and gives the education that it offers its students its special and particular flavor and quality.

As you move out into this world, our best wishes go with you. With you, too, go our prayers that you will continue to remain aware and knowledgeable in those eternal values which underlie the Jewish tradition and heritage, and that as you set out to forge a better and safer and saner world, the training that you have received with us will be your guide. May you leave Stern College not to leave, but to come closer to the things for which it stands, and to make us the benefactors of the high ideals and values and the better life to which you are dedicated and for which you are now prepared to work.

Go from strength to strength, and find success and fulfillment in the years that lie ahead of you.

February 26, 1970

David Mirsky
Dean

When Alicia asked me to write a few words to the class of 1970 I had mixed feelings. On the one hand, I remembered greetings in my college year book that went unread; yet, on the other hand, how could I not say an official goodbye from the Office of Student Services — Mrs. Shimoff, Mrs. Winter and myself — to all of you, both as individuals and as a class?

A college class is not just a conglomerate of individual students but takes on an identity of its own. Its common experience, as men measure time, is, to be sure, of short duration. And yet in those four years the class as a group shares meaningful experiences and each individual in it is concerned with basic questions — be they religious, intellectual, social, or personal. We have shared your collective experience and have been privileged to share with many personal experiences also. In the process an enduring tie between you — as a class and as individuals — and each of us has been formed. This bond is deep and real and need not end; but our tie to the class of 1970 — as a class — will soon belong to the past since your collective existence ends with graduation. And so with a deep sense of thankfulness at being permitted to share with you your college years and with a deep sense of sorrow for that which will no longer be we say goodbye.

Hashem yishmor tsetcha uvo' echa me' atah ve' ad olam.

Lorah Lieberman

Recent statistics reveal that as many as 95 percent of American Jewish youth enter college and about 77 percent receive college degrees. Very few however have had your good fortune to have been exposed to secular studies and higher Jewish values at the same time. The Judaism that you have studied has its roots at Sinai and expresses itself through a vast literature, comprehensive theology and functional ethics.

Our sages have taught us that Judaism does not express itself in study alone. We are not satisfied with an abstract faith or disembodied sentiment. Our study is to guide our daily conduct, and our faith is to lead to noble acts, and our visions are to be translated into reality.

In a world that has become indifferent to ethical values, we depend upon young people imbued with our rich cultural heritage to light a candle and show the way. The Stern College graduate is uniquely suited for it.

The SENIOR FOLLIES

A section of "fantastic"
Graduating Seniors
and Contemporary Hang-Ups

During the past four years much has happened to us, both as a class and as individuals. We have lived in New York; we've lived in Israel; we formed lasting friendships and made pleasant acquaintances; we've been fools and philosophers; we've had hang-ups and happiness.

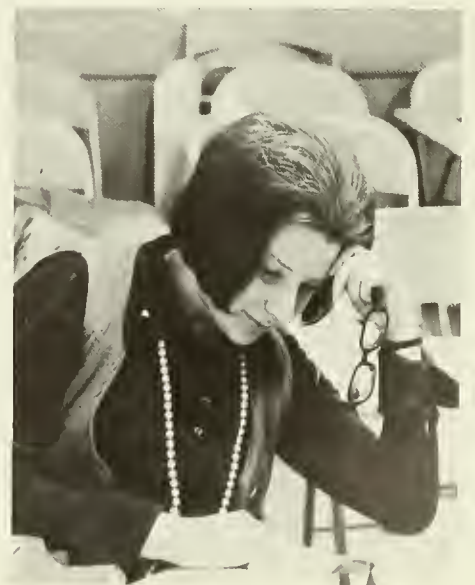

The memories of these years are ineffable essences of the past. They cannot be captured completely, but they can be preserved within the hearts of each of us. The following pages are dedicated to these memories.

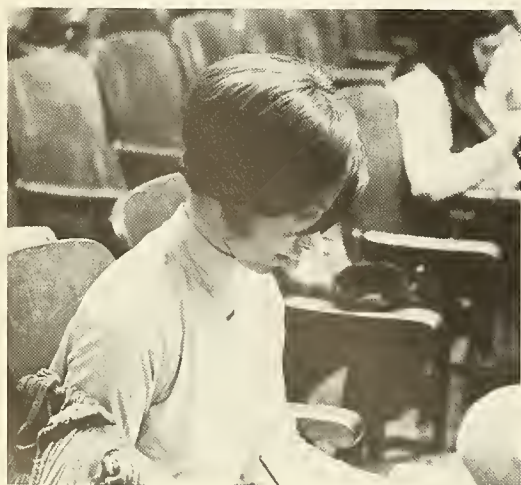

They said it couldn't be done and, at times, we almost believed them. But, somehow or other, we finally made it. We finished Kochaviah '70!

In all seriousness, though, the Yearbook has been a very rewarding experience. Through it, we have experienced the difficulties and the joys of working on something that we will always share as a class. It is illustrative of the development of our class and of the tradition of Kochaviah. In it we seek to make no social comment, for enough is said elsewhere. We do, however, make a commitment. We commit ourselves to our memories and to the challenges evoked by the last four years.

Special thanks are due to some of those who have already made their commitment with us: to our friends and roommates who tolerated our often disruptive sessions, to our editorial staff, to Mrs. Lichtenstein, our advisor, to Mrs. Shimoff, and to Enid, Naomi, and Raananah for their moral support.

To them and to our underclassmen, we leave the hope that they will always share with us this simultaneous commitment to the past and to the future.
